

Berkeley Marchers Massing

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Thousands of protesters massed today for a march on a disputed three-acre property which they call the "people's park."

Amid predictions that the crowd could number up to 50,000, Alameda County Sheriff Frank Madigan said Thursday the law forces he commands would be armed with shotguns and would use all the force needed to maintain order.

Organizers of the march said they wanted to walk nonviolently to the park, recently fenced by the university and now guarded by 200 National Guard troops, and demand that it be "returned to the people."

They also have said "the fence will come down," but have not said how.

The university put up a chain-link fence May 15 around the vacant lot where young people had planted grass and flowers and installed playground equipment. The university said the lot would be used as an intramural soccer field.

Disturbances broke out that day as the young people tried to reoccupy the field.

Madigan told a news conference Thursday that his men used double-0 buckshot in their guns to quell the disturbance after they ran out of lightweight birdshot.

Doctors have said that James Rector, 25, who was among 130 wounded that day, died four days later of buckshot wounds.

Madigan, defending his men's use of shotguns, displayed a table loaded with bricks, stones and metal fragments and said "a deadly force was being used against us" and that it was a case of using shotguns or "give the city of Berkeley to the dissidents."

He said he could produce witnesses to testify that Rector was among those throwing things at the police. In San Jose, where Rector lived, police said he was a convicted burglar and was being sought at the time as a probation violator and on a marijuana charge.

The marchers planned to assemble today at "people's park No. 2," a mile northwest of the disputed territory. From the assembly point they planned to march at noon by various routes to surround the fenced-in area three blocks south of the university. The 200 National Guardsmen on duty at the park are part of 2,000 stationed in the area and available in case of trouble.

An estimated 300 medical students, interns and medical teachers have been organized to accompany the marchers. Dr. Philip R. Lee, chancellor of the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco, said they would seek to prevent violence and to take care of injuries if they occur. They have the approval of authorities, he said.

Names of Viet Dead Read at a Memorial

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The names of 31,379 United States servicemen killed in Vietnam were solemnly intoned in an overnight Memorial Day vigil ending today.

Several readers took turns in the quiet recitation. It began noon Thursday at the downtown federal office building and moved to the Liberty Memorial mall.

The names were read from the March 25 Congressional Record.

Memorial Day Observed With Vigils, Protests

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Americans today mark their 102nd annual observance of Memorial Day with the traditional tributes to those who have died in the nation's wars and with vigils protesting the war in Vietnam.

It is a day of parades and picnics, beach outings and baseball games and the 53rd running of the Indianapolis 500. It is also the start of a three-day weekend and millions left the cities Thursday evening to enjoy a minivacation. The National Safety Council predicted between 550 and 650 persons would die in traffic accidents during the weekend.

In many communities across the country, antiwar groups plan to read the names of the more than 35,000 Americans who have given their lives in the Vietnam war.

Traditional observances include parades organized by veterans and other groups to honor those who fell fighting for the country. Some were aimed specifically at counterpointing the antiwar protests.

In Washington, Vice President Spiro T. Agnew defended American policy in Vietnam saying, "Today, the battle continues but the enemy's thrust has been contained."

Agnew, representing President Nixon, spoke out in a Memorial Day address prepared for delivery at Arlington National Cemetery where he placed a presidential wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

He said the U.S. "obligation to freedom extends beyond our consciences, our communities and the borders of our country" and pledged the administration will "perform our solemn obligation to those who lie here in Arlington."

The President and his entire family were spending a quiet weekend at their waterfront home in Key Biscayne, Fla. In proclaiming May 30 as Memorial Day, the chief executive

Rocky Plays Down Woes on Latin Tour

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — After the most disruptive outbreak of his Latin American tour, Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller says he doesn't blame Ecuadorian students for using his visit as "an outlet for a demonstration."

The New York governor, who has been trying to play down the violence which has plagued his fact-finding mission for President Nixon, called it a tragedy that "a very small minority... could block our countries from having normal relations with each other."

But he added, "These students have got their own convictions. They want to express them. They use this official visit as an outlet for a demonstration. I don't blame them."

Student mobs protesting Rockefeller's visit Thursday hurled gasoline bombs at the U.S. Information Service center and dynamited the entrance to the U.S.-Ecuadorian Binational Center in Quito.

A 60-year-old man was reported to have suffocated from tear gas police used to disperse demonstrators who twice halted the governor's motorcade as it moved through the capital.

Three American newsmen were injured slightly by rock-throwing students, and a taxi carrying three Rockefeller aides and an American newswoman was stoned when it halted in a traffic jam. A policeman was reported wounded by a gunshot.

A heavy guard surrounded the governor's motorcade, and Rockefeller never saw the disorders. He waved to bystanders not involved in the protests.

Rockefeller attended a luncheon at the presidential palace and conferred with President Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra and ranking Ecuadorian officials. The Rockefeller party then boarded a bus and was escorted to a hotel by two trucks loaded with paratroopers.

Rockefeller told newsmen Velasco and his Cabinet were critical of restrictions attached to U.S. aid and the red tape involved in pursuing aid projects.

In Colombia, where the Rockefeller mission visited Tuesday and Wednesday, students clashed with police for the third straight day Thursday in continuing protests against the American mission.

The National University in Bogota and Atlantic University in Barranquilla were closed indefinitely, and the army encircled the Bogota campus after students attempted to seize it.

Sea Dog Wins Fame, Loses Girl

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Michael Kane docked triumphantly Thursday after sailing 30,000 miles around the world in 22 months. "I've accomplished what I've set out to do," said Kane, 29, "but I've lost my girl."

She wasn't on hand to greet him and had told him by mail that the tide was out for him.

Kane, a former Marine captain, set sail from Newport Beach Aug. 2, 1967, planning a one-year voyage to Australia and back. He told his girlfriend he meant to become serious on his return.

When he reached Tahiti, he "decided to go the distance—that I'd do something worth talking about before I settled down." This extended the journey by 10 months.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Kane of Kenilworth, Ill., and Kane's sister Barbara, 21, welcomed him at Newport Beach.

"I guess she got tired of waiting," Kane said of his girlfriend. "I don't blame her really—perhaps we can still get together."

He said his voyage was designed to prove "once and for ever that a trimaran is a seaworthy craft." His yacht called Carousin II resembles three 40-foot bananas separated by about five feet with a plank deck atop them. It carries a score of sails, a 35-horsepower outboard motor and living quarters equipped with bunks, an alcohol stove, a fresh water sink and refrigerator.

He was helped at different times along the voyage by 37 crewmen including nine women. His only fulltime companion was his cat, Thunderball.

Often during the trip "only the good Lord and luck saved me," Kane told newsmen.

Warning on Liquor

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — A state legislative committee in North Carolina, a tobacco growing and manufacturing state where there has been opposition to proposals for stronger health warnings on cigarette packages, approved Thursday a bill to require liquor to carry a health warning.

Under the proposal, all bottles of liquor sold in the state would carry a label saying: "Caution—use of alcoholic beverages may be injurious to your health."

U.S.'s Vietnam Role Supported by Agnew

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew declared today that "the enemy's thrust has been contained" in Vietnam.

And he said U.S. forces in Southeast Asia are defending not only South Vietnam but the integrity of the United States as well.

Agnew spoke out in a Memorial Day address prepared for delivery at Arlington National Cemetery, where he placed a presidential wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. He represented President Nixon, who is in Florida, at the ceremonies in the cemetery where 149,000 dead are buried, including 1,425 casualties of the Vietnam war.

The vice president's defense of American policy came amid Senate controversy over U.S. battlefield initiatives in the Vietnam conflict.

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield delivered a Memorial Day speech of his own in the Senate Thursday, saying U.S. efforts to keep military pressure on the Communists have not produced any indication that the war is closer to an end.

"It is time to consider adjusting these continuing policies," Mansfield said, defending the critical position taken by Sen.

Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Kennedy, the Senate's No. 2 Democrat, had stirred controversy by terming the U.S. attacks which took Dong Ap Bia Hill last week as irresponsible.

The Kennedy charge drew sharp Republican retorts in the Senate and a defense of U.S. tactics at the White House.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois plans a Monday speech certain to add to the criticism of Kennedy.

Agnew said the U.S. "obligation to freedom extends beyond our consciences, our communities and the borders of our country."

"Thus, when our citizens question why we defend the integrity of free nations in Southeast Asia, the answer is that we are defending not only their integrity, but ours," Agnew said.

"Today, the battle continues but the enemy's thrust has been contained," he said.

"An alliance of free nations has learned that you cannot compromise another nation's freedom to preserve your own. To cast this wisdom away is to dishonor the memory of every man that lies here."

Argentina Crippled By Strike

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — A 24-hour nationwide general strike, coming after a night of violence in the Argentine heartland, appeared to have brought a halt to most commerce, industry and transportation across the country today.

The military government kept its armed forces on alert status.

The walkout of workers on this normal business day in Argentina began at midnight to protest what unions and student groups described as police brutality in putting down student outbursts over the past three weeks.

Snipers and soldiers continued exchanging gunfire in the central Argentine city of Cordoba.

Five deaths were confirmed in Cordoba, the nation's third largest city, where armored and airborne military forces were called in Thursday to put down rioting.

A soldier died this morning in a Cordoba hospital, becoming the first military man to lose his life in the wave of disorders that have shaken Argentina for the past three weeks.

The death toll has risen to 10 in the almost daily confrontations of students and workers against the police. The Argentine labor movement set aside its internal disputes and called today's strike.

The workers of an automobile factory were shot to death in Cordoba and an engineer was asphyxiated Thursday afternoon when police opened fire on a column of almost 6,000 students and striking workers who were marching toward the center of the city.

Another worker was found shot dead in a Cordoba park late Thursday night.

Cordoba is under rigid military control. Army Gen. Eladio Sanchez Lahoz declared a curfew from 8:30 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. and ordered his troops to shoot anybody on the streets without authorization.

Military tribunals were scheduled to begin trying 22 persons arrested during the Cordoba rioting. Of these, eight were identified by one newspaper as foreigners, but their nationalities were not known. The government has blamed Communists for the unrest.

In Buenos Aires, the federal police confirmed that one man was killed when a bomb exploded Thursday in their central headquarters.

Mrs. Hickenbottom To Leave Hospital

Mrs. Nona Hickenbottom was to be released from St. Luke's Hospital today in Kansas City, almost one month exactly since she underwent a kidney transplant operation.

She will stay with relatives in Independence for about two weeks before returning to her home here, it was learned. A spokesman said Mrs. Hickenbottom was "looking and feeling real good."

Communists are Accused Of Violating Ceasefire

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. military headquarters accused the Communist command today of 34 violations in the first eight hours of a 24-hour cease-fire the South Vietnamese government declared to mark the observance of Buddha's birthday.

U.S. headquarters said 23 enemy soldiers and two Americans were killed and 17 Americans were wounded in 18 incidents which were considered "significant" because they resulted in casualties.

South Vietnamese headquarters said there were 25 "enemy initiated" incidents against the South Vietnamese military units and civilians since the start of a 48-hour truce the Viet Cong declared for the holiday.

"Of those enemy initiated incidents, 14 inflicted casualties on four civilians and three village or hamlet chief abducted and 16 soldiers and 18 civilians wounded," South Vietnamese headquarters said.

The U.S. Command did not begin recording incidents until the start of the 24-hour cease-fire since it maintained it was ignoring the Viet Cong truce.

The Viet Cong truce began at 7 a.m. Thursday and ends at 7 a.m. Saturday Saigon time, one hour after the allied cease-fire ends.

The U.S. rules were that American offensive operations would be halted for 24 hours, but that reconnaissance flights and patrols would continue "to keep our guard up," as an American spokesman put it.

The Americans would fire back if fired on first.

But the Viet Cong ground rules announced in a broadcast implied the Viet Cong would consider reconnaissance flights and patrols as provocative acts and would attack them.

Five U.S. reconnaissance patrols came under attack after the allied cease-fire began at points 30 to 35 miles northwest and northeast of Saigon and farther north along the central coastal plain. One American was reported killed and 13 wounded. Enemy losses were put at 10 killed and three captured.

One American reconnaissance helicopter was shot down and destroyed and three others damaged in areas ranging from 29 to 61 miles northwest of Saigon.

Coalition No Good, Says Thieu

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam said today he would never accept a coalition government with the Viet Cong.

He also made it clear that his government would oppose any unilateral withdrawal of allied forces from South Vietnam before a "guaranteed peace" is attained.

When newsmen asked him about a coalition he said: "I want to make my answer short for your convenience. Never."

Thieu wound up his four-day state visit to South Korea and then his 30-member party left by plane for Taipei, Formosa.

On the troops withdrawal issue, Thieu said "as soon as the aggressor forces withdraw, we will withdraw."

He added that "as long as we have no guaranteed peace, you (Korean troops) have to stay with us."

In a joint communique issued prior to Thieu's departure, both the Vietnamese president and Korean President Chung Hee Park also "reiterated their common resolve to reject the demand of the Communist side for the unilateral and unconditional withdrawal of the allied forces from Vietnam."

Sedalia Woman Dies In Traffic Accident

Pettis County's fourth traffic fatality of the year was recorded at 7:45 p.m. Thursday following a three-vehicle accident north of Green Ridge at Highway 127 and Route AA.

Dead is Miss Velma Wells, 74, of 1212 East Broadway. Also injured in the same car, a 1966 Dodge sedan driven east on AA by John Kubli, 73, of 1400 East Broadway, were:

Mrs. Ollie Mines, 85, in fair condition at Bothwell Hospital; Mrs. Edna Kubli, in serious condition, and Will Bond, Ottumwa, in fair condition. Kubli complained of shoulder and back pain.

A Kansas City couple, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Ahleen, who were heading south on Highway 125 in their 1964 Oldsmobile sedan, were also injured. Ahleen suffered several broken bones and his wife suffered a broken nose and cuts.

Erney Durrill, 35, Green Ridge, driver of a 1969 Chevrolet pickup, escaped with minor injuries.

According to the Highway Patrol, the accident occurred when the Kubli car drove into the path of the Ahleen vehicle, causing that car to strike the Durrill truck, which had stopped to make a left turn onto Route AA from Highway 125.

Mrs. Wells was born Oct. 26, 1894, in Latham. She was a member of the East Sedalia Baptist Church.

She was the widow of the late Luther E. Wells, who died in 1964.

She is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Fred Powell, Torrence, Calif.; Mrs. Martin York, Tipton, Mo.; Mrs. J. E. Long, Crocker, Mo.; Mrs. Milan Vunovich, Kansas City; a son Leon R. Wells, 1020 South Vermont; 11 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements are incomplete. The body is at the Heckart-Gillespie Funeral Home.

Judge Goes Fishing

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Judge Harold Paul sent a jury home and then said he was "going fishing" until he gets paid.

The judge, a member of Schuylkill County Common Pleas Court, said Wednesday he would resume the personal damage suit that he interrupted whenever he gets paid.

The state's 265 Common Pleas Court judges were notified this week that their pay would be delayed because the judicial salary fund is empty.

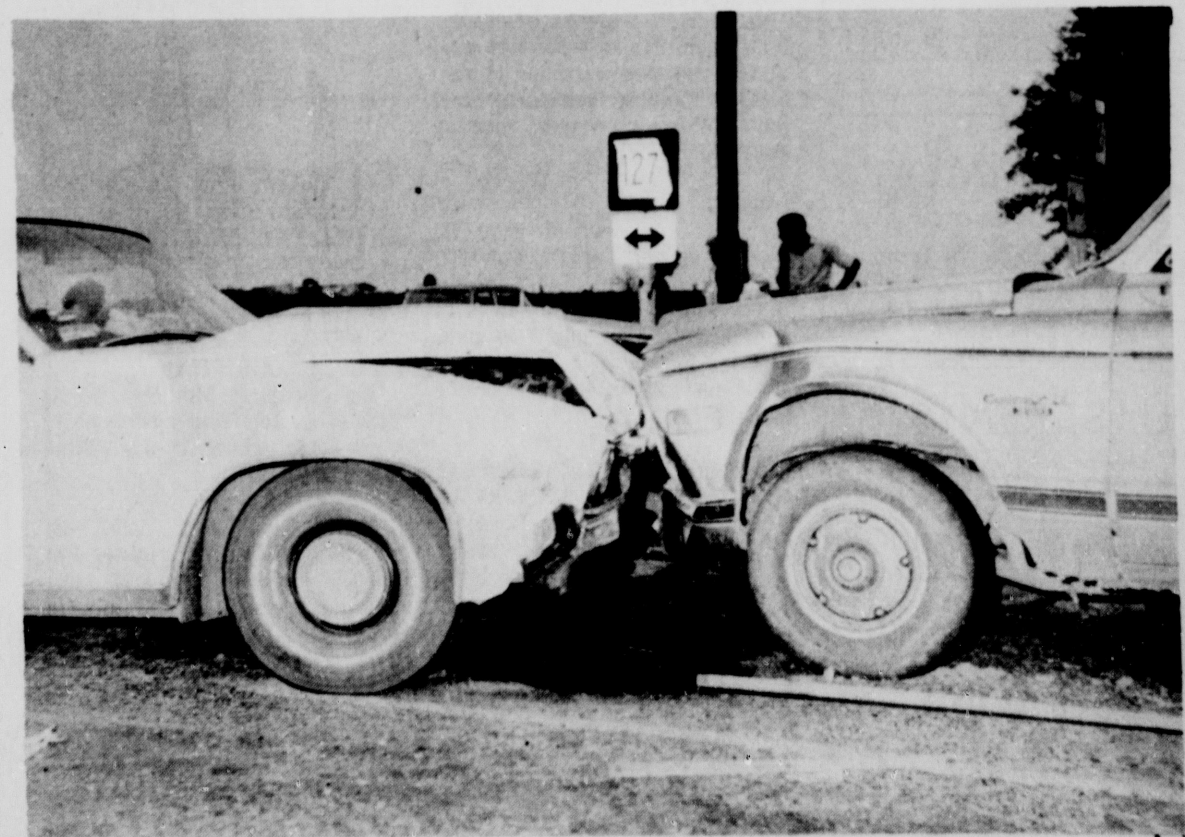

The state House of Representatives, Tuesday passed a $245,000 deficiency appropriation bill to replenish the fund.

Rogers is Back

Secretary of State William Rogers returned from an 18-day world tour Thursday and said he was "tremendously impressed" by U.S. and

South Vietnamese fighting men. At right is Vice-President Spiro Agnew, who led the welcoming committee at Andrews AFB, Md. (UPI)

Religious Book Business Gets Riskier Each Month

GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rapid and unpredictable changes in the ways of faith have cast a cloud of uncertainty over religious book publishing—and also dealt a heavy blow to the merchandising of religious items.

But authorities foresee the possibilities of new kinds of religious trade supplanting the old. Although shifts in religious thought and methods "have caused havoc in the ranks of Catholic publishing, they have in them the seed which will open whole new horizons," says John J. Delaney of Doubleday & Co.

But for now, the outlook is considered shaky. Signs of the repercussions abound, including:

The market for standard-type religious books, such as prayer books and missals, was reported bogged down and temporarily almost wiped out, because of recurring revisions.

Sales of religious books generally last year were down slightly.

Several long-time church publishing houses recently have been absorbed by large general publishing complexes.

Book ideas, considered timely when contracted with writers, often are dated or even obsolete by the time the manuscripts are completed and published 18 months later.

Across the country, scores of religious stores, handling religious books as well as statues, rosaries, medals and other religious articles, have closed.

John Brost, executive secretary of the National Church Goods Association of Chicago, said about 100 such outlets have gone out of business since 1955.

More than 50 of them since reforms of the 1962-65 Second Vatican Council.

"People aren't as inclined as they used to be to buy articles of devotion for their homes or as gifts," Brost said. "This seems to be the situation not only among Catholics, but among Episcopalians, Lutherans and others."

However, among religious supply firms mainly serving churches, church schools and other institutions, he said, "the mortality has not been great."

About 90 of them nationwide belong to the association.

As for the book trade, he said, "the situation is uproarious."

What's good last week is on the way out next." He said missals, the Catholic worship guides, have been "repeatedly antiquated" since 1964, with prayers deleted or added.

Elimination of Barriers Topic of Trade Meeting

By LISA CRONIN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A proposal to eliminate most trade barriers on manufactured goods will be studied by some of the world's top businessmen at a meeting of the International Chamber of Commerce in Istanbul this week.

Jean Royer, former deputy executive secretary of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade developed the plan which calls for the elimination of quotas and other barriers to trade over a 10-year period beginning in 1972. Royer aims at complete freedom for more than 70 per cent of international merchandise trade.

The Royer plan calls for the reduction of those tariffs remaining after the Kennedy Round of reductions by 10 per cent a year. He would also like to see an attack on nontariff barriers, particularly quotas, and clearer definitions of such practices as dumping and subsidies.

Royer would, however, establish some kind of preferential treatment for developing nations.

The report already has the warm support of the U.S. Council of the International Chamber, Judd Polk, staff economist for the American group, said.

The Istanbul congress also will take a close look at the multinational corporations which economist Sidney Rolfe believes will eventually lead to the development of a world economy.

Rolfe's monumental analysis of "The International Corporation," which was commissioned by the ICC, will form the background paper for the congress.

The American economist has pointed out that 77 of the largest U.S. companies have 25 per cent or more of their assets, earnings or employment overseas, and 199 have 10 per cent or more. International production

Senator is Opposed To the ABM System

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Thomas J. McIntyre has become the 49th senator to declare himself opposed to deployment of the President Nixon's anti-missile system, but in announcing his stand he proposed a possible compromise.

The New Hampshire Democrat, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee and chairman of its research subcommittee, suggested continued research on the Safeguard anti-ballistic missile—ABM—program's computers and radars, possibly at two proposed ABM sites in Montana and North Dakota.

Negro Request To Methodists Is Accepted

FAYETTE, Mo. (AP) — The United Methodist Church of western Missouri agreed Thursday night after four hours of discussion to a request for funds from its Negro ministries, but not to the amount.

Black Methodists for Church Renewal had asked the Missouri West Conference of the church for a three-year program of $300,000 a year, to be distributed to Negro Methodist communities in western Missouri.

The conference voted to provide the program approximately $155,000 a year over the next three years. Funds will be administered by the Black Methodists, a national organization within the United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Phil Lawson of Kansas City, temporary chairman of the Black Methodists in western Missouri, estimated the total could reach $558,000.

Protection Is Sought By Church

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — On the sunny walkways surrounding St. Patrick's Cathedral, blue-uniformed policemen stood vigil at a half-dozen entrances as tourists and worshippers threaded in and out of the towering mid-Manhattan sanctuary.

"The church asked for protection," an officer explained about the special detail on duty around the block-square facilities of the New York Roman Catholic archdiocese. "It's this Forman thing. They're afraid he'll show up and make trouble."

That anxiety, along with a mixture of resentment, sympathy and perplexity, is whipping through religious institutions today because of James Forman.

At present, he is "the most disturbing critic of the churches from the extreme militant point of view," said the Rev. George E. Sweazey, of Webster Groves, Mo., the newly elected moderator of the United Presbyterian Church, in a letter sent throughout the denomination.

In just one month, Forman's avowed "war" on churches and synagogues for financial reparations to Negroes has erupted widely in major religious communities, with reactions ranging from partial affirmation to outrage.

He "is giving nightmares to religious leaders who handle bills, budgets and bank accounts," comments the Catholic weekly, Ave Maria.

Bearing his "Black Manifesto," adopted April 27 by a formative meeting of the National Black Economic Development Conference in Detroit, demanding reparations of $500 million for Negro development projects, he has confronted one religious body after another, claiming specific payments.

Already, the individual demands in different church groups total $850 million, plus $1.5 billion for black colleges, far more than the original half-billion figure set in the manifesto, even though several major denominations have not been hit at all.

Responses have varied from steps to boost aid to Negroes on the one hand to blunt rejection on the other.

But even in denominations projecting some positive response, leaders generally have denounced the threatening tone and tactics of the manifesto.

And none of the churches have promised funds to Forman's particular group.

"If we adopt this alternative," the senator said, "we would not be contributing in any overt way to an intensification of the arms race, because no weapons would be deployed."

"The Soviets would have an incentive, rooted in their own self-interest, to enter promptly into effective negotiations for arms limitations, because we would be developing the capacity to deploy at a later date," he said.

"This alternative would save hundreds of millions of dollars which could be used at home."

Rev. David Bunch, Southern Baptist Missionary, Des Moines, Iowa, will preach in the first Baptist Church for both services Sunday. Rev. Bunch was born in Eldon. Both his father and grandfather are Baptist ministers. He attended school at Southwest Baptist, William Jewell and Central Baptist Seminary. He has been pastor at the Hopewell church and Mt. Herman Church.

Speaker for Week

The Rev. Mgr. Howard Froberg, pastor of the Salvation Army, will be the speaker on the KDRO 8:45 a.m. Morning Devotional program June 2-6. The weekly program is sponsored by the Sedalia-Pettis county Ministers Association.

Sex Education Bill Is Given Approval

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — A bill banning sex education below the ninth grade in all public school classrooms won 94-4 approval in the Louisiana House Wednesday night.

"We keep alcoholics and narcotics away from them until they are 17 and we ought to keep this mess (sex education) away from them, too," said the author, Rep. Fred Hayes, D-La-fayette, during a three-hour debate.

As amended in the House, the bill would permit sex education in higher grades if local school boards, the State Education Board and parents approve. Such classes would have to be held separately for each sex.

Road Work Possible, Club Told

With or without a gas tax increase, Missouri is capable of undertaking a five-year state highway improvement program that dwarfs any similar program in the state's history. John H. Denman, executive director of the Missouri Oil Council, Jefferson City, told Sedalia Kiwanians at their meeting in Bothwell Hotel Thursday noon.

A study made by the Council, he said, shows that Missouri is capable of a construction program in excess of one billion dollars in the next five years. This would be an increase of more than 37 per cent over the $836 million spent during the past five years.

The speaker emphasized that the Missouri Oil Council will support an increase in the State motor fuel tax if it can be clearly shown more funds are needed to construct and maintain safe and adequate roads throughout the state.

Denman was accompanied by Earl Koontz, assistant director, and both were introduced by Major Howard Froberg, program chairman.

President Roy Brown reported that a total of 136 members of the 91st United States Congress are active or honorary members of Kiwanis. President Nixon is a former member of the La Habra, Calif. club; Vice-President Agnew a member of the Lock Raven, Maryland, club; and Defense Secretary Melvin Laird a member of the club of Marshfield, Wis.

The president congratulated Vernon Bingham on the arrival of a new son this week, and the father responded by passing out cigars to the members.

Also congratulated was Sylvan Woolery whose son, William G. is salutatorian of the Smith-Cotton High school graduating class of 1969.

President Brown read a communication from the Business and Professional Women's club concerning the memorial flag-raising ceremony at 6:15 o'clock Monday evening, June 2, at Liberty Park to honor D. Kelly Scruton, deceased, for his contribution to the youth development programs in the Sedalia community.

The president also announced that Robert Fritz had been chosen a director to fill the one year unexpired term of Monty McQuitty who was elected vice-president recently.

Invocation was by Wendell Smith. Singing was led by Abe Rosenthal with Mrs. Lillian Fox, accompanist. Birthday greetings were extended to Kenneth Klamert.

Guests were: Adolph Jurgens, Edwards, Mo., with Frank Wagner; and John McCloskey with Henry C. Salveter.

Deaths Mount As Highways Get Clogged

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thousands of motorists were on the road today, out to enjoy the first warm-weather holiday of the year.

Traffic accidents claimed 86 lives.

Six persons from Maryland died in a single crash on Interstate 95 north of Richmond, Va., early today. State police said the rear of the car was struck by a large truck.

In another multiple death crash, five persons, including an elderly couple and two of their grandchildren, were killed late Thursday when their campervan-type pickup truck collided with a trailer truck near Heflin, Ala.

The National Safety Council has estimated that 550 to 650 persons will be killed on the highways between 6 p.m. Thursday and midnight Sunday.

This was in contrast to a death toll of 481 during a recent nonholiday period of the same 78-hour duration. The Associated Press made a survey of traffic deaths from 6 p.m. Thursday, May 15, to midnight Sunday, May 18, to provide a basis for comparison during the holiday period.

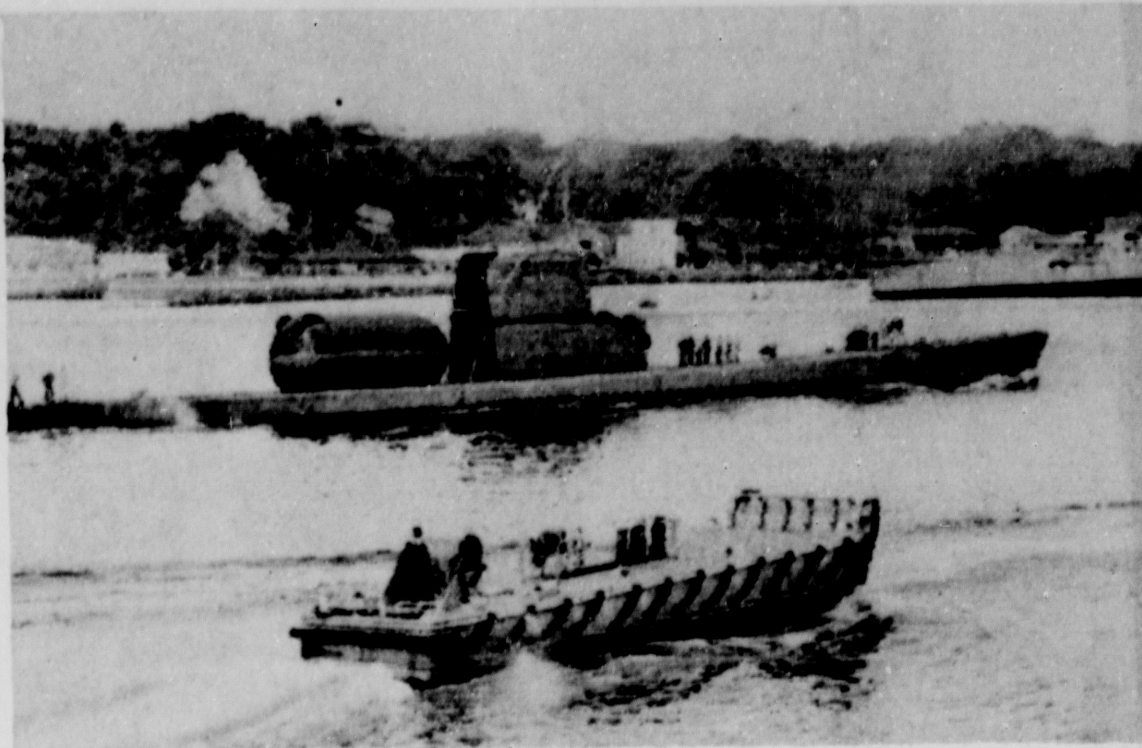

The record number of persons killed over a Memorial Day holiday was 629 during the four-day observance last year.

So far this holiday, one life has been lost in a boating accident and four persons drowned in incidents not associated with boating.

CHURCH FEES ABOLISHED

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Archbishop Hieronymos of Athens and all Greece has abolished mandatory payments to Greek Orthodox priests for officiating at weddings, funerals, baptisms and other church services.

In the future, "it is up to Christians to give any amount they consider proper," the Greek Orthodox primate declared in an encyclical. The funds, he said, "will be distributed between the church and its personnel."

City College O.K.'s a Plan On Admission

NEW YORK (AP) — The City College Faculty Senate has tentatively approved a new admissions policy that would increase the percentage of Negro and Puerto Rican freshmen, but would constitute a rejection of the student-proposed dual admissions plan.

The 87-member body, sitting as a committee of the whole, met in closed session until late Thursday night.

Prof. Bernard Bellush, a spokesman for the group, told newsmen the senate had tentatively rejected "the basic intent" of a plan formulated by faculty, administration and Negro and Puerto Rican negotiators establishing a so-called 50 per cent quota and a waiving academic qualifications for minority groups.

The senate plan calls for admission in the September term of a number of students from selected high schools in Manhattan and the Bronx situated in disadvantaged areas.

Although declining to disclose the exact number of students to be selected, Bellush said there was "sufficient sentiment for the admission of 300 special students on the experimental basis to make the vote on it very tight."

He added that he expected a formal vote on the plan when the senate reconvenes Monday.

Student Dies After Setting Himself Afire

NEW YORK (AP) — A 20-year-old Columbia University student died today at Bellevue Hospital nine hours after he set himself afire on the lawn of the United Nations to protest "genocide" in Biafra.

Bruce Mayrock, of Old Westbury, N.Y., a village on Long Island, was burned over most of his body when he was admitted to the hospital in "very critical condition shortly after 3 p.m. Thursday."

He had been spotted in the U.N. garden with his clothes ablaze. When guards tried to extinguish the flames he ran in circles to elude them.

A sign found on the grass read: "You must stop genocide—please save 9 million Biafrans." At the hospital a rabbi who described himself as a close friend of the family said of the youth: "He was an idealistic young man deeply upset by the events in Biafra. People were being killed and he felt no one was doing anything."

Suez Canal Fire Flares Several Hours

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Artillery and light weapons fire flared intermittently for seven hours during the night across the Suez Canal, the army announced today. Six Israeli soldiers were wounded.

A spokesman accused the Egyptians of shooting first and it was not immediately known if the fire was returned.

The canal has been reported relatively quiet recently after heavy artillery battles during the past three months.

The fighting followed a clash between Israeli and Syrian planes Thursday in which both sides claimed a kill and an artillery duel on the Jordan River in which two Israeli soldiers were killed and two wounded, by Israeli account.

A single bazooka shell was fired from Jordan at an Israeli army patrol near Hamadia in the Beisan Valley, the Israeli state radio reported.

Fire was returned and there were no casualties, the report added. The patrol unearthed several mines on the Jordan River cease-fire line just north of Hamadia and disarmed them, the radio said.

The semi-official newspaper Davar warned Jordan to keep the border cool.

"Israel will not remain in the sidelines following the Jordanian army's aggression, because in so doing it can only encourage this aggression," said Davar.

British Medical Uproar

LONDON (AP) — The disclosure that a machine keeping a donor's heart beating was deliberately switched off before the nation's third heart transplant operation has touched off a medical ethics controversy.

The donor, student nurse Margaret Sinsbury, was brought to Guy's Hospital in London two weeks ago suffering from severe injuries received in a motorcycle accident. Two physicians decided she had no chance of recovery, and the breathing machine which kept her heart beating was disconnected.

Her heart stopped two minutes later and was transplanted to Charles Hendrick, a 59-year-old book dealer, now reported in good condition and able to walk around his hospital room.

Senior surgeons at the hospital insist that Miss Sinsbury was dead before the machine was switched off and that mechanical body functions were being maintained artificially.

However, Dr. Geoffrey Spencer, head of the intensive care unit at St. Thomas's Hospital, has called for public safeguards to protect patients under such circumstances.

W. J. Dempster, an instructor in experimental surgery at Hammersmith Hospital, commented: "What they did was euthanasia. Why on the public?"

The London Times defended switching off the machine, saying it would be "both pointless and morally wrong to attempt to prolong a life which has already ceased to exist."

asked Americans to make it a day of prayer for the nation's war dead and for world peace.

At Torrington, Conn., two Pulitzer Prize winners, author William Styron and playwright Arthur Miller, were among those reading from the list of Vietnam war dead during a 24-hour vigil.

The Rev. Joseph Duffey began the ceremony by saying the occasion was "a time for mourning not only those who have died in past wars, but also the continuing American involvement in Vietnam."

Similar vigils were held by students at the University of Chicago, by a nondenominational group in Kansas City and by demonstrators from several church groups in Buffalo.

At Scottsbluff, Neb., national leaders of veterans organizations gathered for services at Hiram Scott college designed to combat what they termed "the irresponsible minority of college students who wish to disrupt and destroy the basis of our democratic society."

Residents of New York City have their choice of 28 traditional parades or an untraditional march from Central Park to Madison Square by antiwar groups.

In Arcadia, Fla., the citizens honor the resting places of 23 young Royal Air Force flying cadets who died in crashes during World War II while training at Florida bases for combat against the Nazis.

The comment came during a council meeting Wednesday night considering reports of sewage backing up in basements. An Air Force Cadet Will Escort Tricia

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — Air Force Academy cadet Ken C. Nuss will escort President Nixon's daughter Tricia to the annual academy graduation ball June 3. The Air Force said today that Nuss, 24, of Frederika, Iowa, was chosen Tuesday night but the announcement was held off until today. An honors student for four years, Nuss is headed for jet pilot training after graduation.

Academy officials said the Nixons were expected to arrive here Tuesday afternoon and stay overnight before the President delivers the commencement address Wednesday. When asked if he expected a chaperone to the dance, Nuss replied: "I thought I might try to fix up the secret service man with a date of his own."

Hope Idea Will Halt Her Tears

APOLLO, Pa. (AP) — Life has been a steady stream of tears for 3-year-old Becky Rowley but her tears may soon stop. Doctors plan to implant tiny steel tubes, an idea of her father, George Rowley, around Becky's eyes in the hope they'll form a channel to take the place of her tear ducts.

Since birth, Becky's eyes have continually filled with tears—especially when she was outdoors. Doctors surmised she had blocked tear ducts. So they tried to stop her tears by clearing the ducts. For a year they had no success.

Finally, a specialist in childhood eye disorders at Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital discovered she had been born with no tear ducts—and doctors devised another tactic.

They tried to stimulate the formation of scar tissue channels by inserting various appendages into Becky's face.

Nylon threads were looped through the girl's nostrils and out the corners of her eyes. The loops were removed each day so that they wouldn't grow in. This plan failed.

Next, doctors inserted one-half inch metal pins to hold a channel open until scar tissue formed. No success.

Then it was discovered that there was no opening in the bone between Becky's eyes and nose. Surgeons drilled a minute hole on either side of her nose and inserted a polyethylene tube to catch the tears, but doctors knew the body would reject it.

Then Becky's father, a metallurgist Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp's Brackenridge works, theorized that since stainless steel plates and pins are used in surgical procedures in other parts of the body, tubes made of the same substance might be used in Becky's case.

Wilbert Gangloff of Allegheny Ludlum's research center machine shop made the tubes to order for Becky and soon they'll be implanted.

Doctors say the tubes will remain in place for two years, then they'll be removed. It's hoped that nature will form a channel around the tubes and the channel will drain away Becky's tears.

Age Does No Harm To Actor

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The face is more deeply lined and the wavy hair is white, but otherwise Douglas Fairbanks Jr. presents the same romantic figure as when he followed his swashbuckling father in films.

He has returned from his London headquarters, not to renew his film career but to play 15 weeks in Los Angeles and San Francisco as Professor Higgins in the Civic Light Opera's revival of "My Fair Lady."

"It's rather a lark," he commented at his rented Beverly Hills home. "I wanted to see if I could get a fresh approach to the character, and I went back to George Bernard Shaw's notes when he was rehearsing the original play 'Pygmalion'."

"Last summer I experimented with the role in brief engagements in St. Louis, Dallas and Atlanta, preparing for the appearance here. It took almost a year to arrange my affairs so I could conduct my business from here and San Francisco while I'm doing the show."

One of the few actors to have his own cable address (Douglasfair), he has devoted his recent years to public affairs and business enterprises ranging from Scripto Pens (director) to Fairbanks International Business Developments (chairman). Except for occasional ventures like "My Fair Lady," acting does not appear on his agenda.

He explained why he gave up the family profession:

"In 1957, my television series was coming up for renewal, and the sponsors offered to triple the budget. But I had run dry on ideas, and I knew that another season will be a struggle. Now I like prosperity as well as anyone, but I've never been the acquisitive type. I said to myself, 'Why burn yourself up?'"

"I had set aside a fair amount of money, and I'd had 37 years as an actor. Why not quit while I was ahead?"

"I guess I always had that fear of not quitting soon enough. I remember the pain I experienced when I had my own production company at Universal and oldtimers pleaded with me for a day's extra work. People like Herbert Brenon, who had directed 'Peter Pan' and had been a kind of DeMille-like tyrant in films, and Andrew Charlton, who had produced the revues that introduced Bea Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence to America."

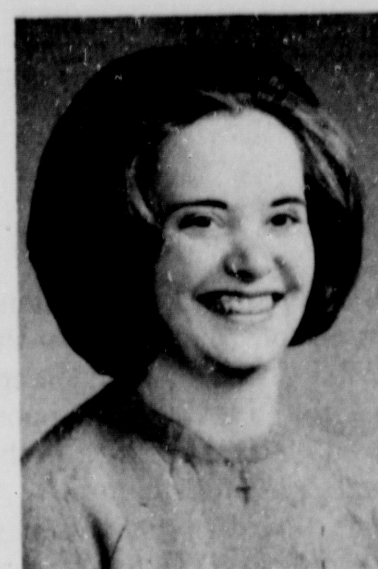

Good Deal Turns Sour for Aurora

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — Purchasing agent Doug McAvoy bought the city a six-ton street sweeper in March because it was "such a good deal we couldn't afford to pass it up."

Part of the reason for the low $11,000 price tag turned up when he sent the serial number to request a maintenance manual from the manufacturer: the sweeper was reported stolen in 1967 from the City of Los Angeles.

McAvoy said the man who sold it to them got it with other assets of a defunct California firm.

Now the seller will give back the $11,000 to Aurora, Aurora will return the sweeper to Los Angeles, and Aurora will buy another one—at $16,000.

State Gas Chamber Put in Storage

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Oregon's gas chamber is going into storage.

John J. Galvin, state corrections director, said Wednesday that the state prison building housing the gas chamber will be torn down to make space for an exercise yard and the chamber will be put in storage.

The gas chamber was installed in 1937 after the legislature changed the method of execution from hanging. Oregon voters abolished the death penalty in 1964.

Even Fido Has Some Complaints of His Own

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks a dog gets tired of hearing.

"If that dog is my best friend, heaven preserve me from my enemies."

"We've never been able to teach Pooch to sit up and beg. It isn't that he's too proud—he's too lazy. He prefers to lie down and beg."

"All right, Pooch, try and struggle to your feet. It's time for you to go down to the basement for the night."

"He's kind of a United Nations dog as far as we can tell—a mixture of Irish wolfhound, Chihuahua, beagle, poodle, and just a hint of Dalmation. His parents were more than careless—they were downright reckless."

"I don't know for sure whether Pooch is stubborn or just stupid. But if you throw a stick, he brings back a stone; if you throw a stone, he brings back a stick. And if you throw both a stick and a stone, he just sits there and scratches his head."

"Martha, did you chew up my slippers? You must be the guilty party, because I know a nice sensible dog like Pooch wouldn't do a thing like that. Would you, Pooch?"

"Quit trying to crawl under the rug and hide, Pooch. It's time for you to take a bath, whether you think you need one or not."

"I distinctly remember putting that steak out on the pounding board less than 10 minutes ago. Where in the world could it have gone?"

"Yes, we thought of entering Pooch in a dog show, but the judges would only laugh themselves to death."

"If you think I'm going to fork out $10 to get that dog's hair clipped for the summer, Martha, you must be out of your mind. If Pooch wants to act like a hippie, let him look like a hippie."

"I wouldn't say he is exactly cowardly, but ever since the lady next door got a cat, Pooch won't go for a walk down that side of the street."

"I see by the newspaper, Martha, that some wealthy woman bought her dog a $2,000 collar set with rubies. Where did we find that old beat-up leather collar that Pooch wears?"

"And here's another item that said a dog won a $500 gold medal for saving a child from drowning. What has Pooch ever tried to save—besides his strength?"

"I'll say one good thing about Pooch—he doesn't keep us awake at night with his howling. After all, a dog has to sit up to do a real job of howling."

"Get the can opener out, Martha, it must be Pooch's mealtime. He's got his eyes open."

"No, I haven't actually caught Pooch lying on the sofa ever since I told him that the next time I did I'd give him to the dog pound. But a couple of times when I surprised him by coming home early, I did catch him sitting in front of the sofa and blowing on the pillows to cool them off."

Highway Post For Director Of Revenue

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's revenue director will go to a $23,000 a year job as director of highways for the State Highway Department July 1.

Jack Stapleton Sr., Highway Commission chairman, announced the move Thursday. It ended weeks of speculation that Thomas A. David, revenue director, would get the new job.

David will get $500 more per year than Chief Engineer J. J. Snider. As director of revenue he makes $19,000 a year.

Aames A. Turner, now director of highway planning, will become an assistant to the chief engineer and advisor to David, Stapleton said.

The new director, Stapleton said, will take many administrative duties off the shoulders of Snider, giving him more time for engineering work.

The director will supervise personnel and see to general departmental housekeeping.

When he assumes the new position, David will be leaving his job as head of the state's largest patronage office. He is 48 and formerly was St. Francois County collector and recorder of deeds.

Turner, 45, is a civil engineering graduate of the University of Missouri. He formerly was district highway engineer at St. Joseph and has been head of highway planning since September 1961.

Moscow and Peking are trading sledgehammer propaganda blows. Their feud seems at a new peak as the Kremlin prepares to be host to an international Communist conference Thursday.

The conference probably has much to do with the intensity of this propaganda war. There is a suggestion in it that Moscow suspects Peking of plotting to embarrass the Russians in some spectacular way during the Moscow meeting.

The territorial squabble already was embarrassing enough. But now China's official news agency has released the text of a statement of claims, which says that the Russians illegally occupy, as the result of unjust treaties of Czarist days, a total of about a million square miles of Chinese territory. That is more than three times the area of France.

The statement goes well beyond simple territorial claims. Since 1960, Peking said, Moscow has sent frontier troops into Chinese territory to build military installations, assault and kidnap inhabitants and carry out subversive activities.

In 1962, the statement added, Moscow incited and coerced more than 60,000 citizens of China in the Ili and Tacheng areas of Sinkiang to go to the Soviet Union, refusing to send them back. Sinkiang is the site of China's nuclear weapons installations. Ili is the scene of Soviet-Chinese fighting in recent years. "Since 1964," the statement continued, "the Soviet government has sent large reinforcements to the Sino-Soviet border, stepped up its violation of the status quo of the boundary, carried out armed provocations and created incidents of bloodshed."

"From Oct. 15, 1964, to March 15 this year, the Soviet side provoked as many as 4,189 incidents, 2 1/2 times the number of those it provoked from 1960 to 1964. Soviet troops intruded into Chinese territory, indulging in murder and arson, killing barehanded Chinese fishermen and peasants by beating and running armored cars over them or even throwing them alive into the river."

The Oct. 15, 1964 date is significant. It was the day of the first Chinese atomic explosion, and also the time of Nikita Khrushchev's overthrow by the present Soviet chiefs. There is a double implication: that the present rulers are, from the Chinese viewpoint, worse than Khrushchev ever was, and that the Russians have designs on the Chinese nuclear installations.

Moscow has been peppering the Chinese with inflammatory propaganda against the rule of Mao Tse-tung, and in the international arena, has been trying to persuade Communists around the world that Mao is a great danger to their movement and to world Communist revolution.

The Chinese government statement spelled out the territorial claims in detail, dating them back to a century ago and claiming that in the last part of the 19th century the Russians annexed Chinese areas more than a dozen times the size of Czechoslovakia.

That Czechoslovakia was singled out for this comparison was hardly accidental. Chinese propaganda has been heavily blasting the Soviet doctrine of "limited sovereignty" under which Moscow excuses its invasion of Czechoslovak territory to smother a reform movement. In Peking's view, that Soviet action spelled threats to many other nations, not excluding China itself.

The Soviet Union, the statement said, "regards heroic Albania as a thorn in its flesh. It menaces Romania and Yugoslavia. Its aggressive designs are even more ambitious, and its claws have stretched out even farther than those of Czarist Russia."

The statement ends with defiant challenges. It quotes Mao as saying that if anybody wants war, the Chinese "can fight to the finish." It announces publication of a Soviet statement on the border question and dares the Russians to publish Peking's side of the quarrel.

"Please do so if you do not have a guilty conscience and are not cowardly and if you do not want to conceal it from the Soviet people," the statement concludes.

Musical Prodigy Difficult During the Formative Years

NEW YORK — (NEA) — When the kids skate over the parquet and "wipe grimy palms on the upholstery, it's easy to wonder why poets wax sentimental over the joys of motherhood.

But Mary Hollander had an even stronger reason to doubt that its joys outnumbered its problems. She had to cope with a son who, at the age of 5 successfully organized "An Evening With Bach," to be presented by his kindergarten class.

At 24, Lorin Hollander is a well-known piano virtuoso. But raising this musical prodigy wasn't an easy job.

"Lorin started formal lessons on the piano at 4 1/2," she said. "His father and I didn't take it seriously. But Lorin did." At the age of 11 he made his debut as a concert pianist at Carnegie Hall and at 14 substituted for Van Cliburn when that artist was ill.

"I used the hit-and-miss method," Mrs. Hollander said. "I had to try everything and hope for the best. There is no easily available educational system in America to provide for these children."

"There was nowhere to go for advice, no source material on how to raise a prodigy in music. And Lorin was superbright in other areas as well."

In second grade he was so advanced that they had to keep him out of the classroom so as not to disturb the others.

"In the third grade my 'genius' was assigned janitor work to keep him busy," his mother recalled.

Mary Hollander worried about possible personality problems with her son. "The kids used to yell 'show-off' at him and when he would raise his hand his teacher would say, 'O.K., Lorin, we know you're a genius.'"

When Lorin was 11, it was suggested that he go to Yale. He passed all the tests but the family didn't want to send him away since he was so young. They tried Columbia next, but the school was not set up to handle the musical prodigy.

He started playing concerts for Baldwin at 11. At 14 he was signed by RCA.

But back to the care and raising of this youngster who at 18 months chose and put on the record player himself the "Alexander Nivensky Cantata" and cried when he had worn out the center hole so that the music played off pitch.

Mary Hollander had the additional responsibility of two other children, bright (her other son now writes rock music, her daughter is a doctor of clinical psychology) but not requiring the special treatment needed by Lorin. How to make them all feel equally loved was a tough chore. She mused, "I wonder if I wasn't often cruel when Lorin was concerned. That boy got it in the neck from all over."

She recalled the time in a class for accelerated children when he was assigned to do a book report on the novel of his choice. He chose "The Turn of the Screw," because he was fascinated by Benjamin Britten's music on the theme.

When the report was returned to him, his instructor had written across the front page, "On my salary I don't have to evaluate a treatise on Henry James and Benjamin Britten." "There should be a special school for these kids," Mrs. Hollander said. "They need a place to show off. Lorin used to wait for someone to come home so he could play to an audience. Once he held the mailman captive for 40 minutes." The Hollanders finally placed their son in the Children's Professional School.

Lorin started on tour when he was 14. "He was looked after by Baldwin representatives," his mother said. "I didn't travel with him. I had a family to care for at home."

His father, who was first violinist under Toscanini, said, "This is his bag. Let him find out for himself how rough it is."

"There were some cruel things," Mary said. "He once called from Denver, saying, 'I have a bad cold, mom.' I told him to get the manager to give him some aspirin. I didn't hop on the next plane. I think now of what might have happened."

The "hit-and-miss" method of raising a genius apparently worked. Lorin today is successful, happily married and bringing classical music to an unlikely audience in an imaginative manner.

"While the other arts move with the times," he said, "classical concerts are still presented the way they were 200 years ago."

He has changed that. In Edwardian garb he designed himself, he plays for today's young rebels. He advertises his concerts in underground newspapers with an invitation to come as you are.

Men Who Set the Pace

What was once merely the dream of visionaries has become almost routine reality.

How quickly we have accepted the fact that six men, in two tiny space-going cockleshells named Apollo 9 and Apollo 10, have actually left man's ancient home of earth and all but touched the face of the moon.

How easily we will accept the fact that two men have actually walked upon the surface of earth's satellite, as they will in July, if Apollo 11 performs as splendidly as its predecessors — and who doubts that it will?

Only slightly less amazing is the fact that through the miracle of radio and television we are able to accompany them on their journey as we sit in the comfort of our living rooms, that we can see the earth as they see it and as only the gods have seen it before — a lovely, lonely globe of blue and white hanging in the blackness of infinity.

It requires a real effort to remember back less than 12 years when a Russian rocket launched a sphere called Sputnik into orbit around the earth — and abruptly propelled mankind into the space age. Immediately there was speculation about men going into space themselves, not just how soon they could do it but if they could do it at all.

Would human flesh be able to survive the acceleration forces of a rocket at lift-off? What would be the effects of solar radiation, of prolonged weightlessness? Could technology solve an endless array of problems, such as building a rocket powerful enough to carry a man or developing materials that could withstand the searing stress of re-entry into the atmosphere? What about the even more complex navigation and life-support problems involved in an actual flight to the moon and return to earth?

In 12 short years, and after an investment of billions of calculations, of man hours and of dollars — by far the most tremendous undertaking ever conceived by man — many problems have been solved, many questions have been answered.

Not that the danger has been removed, or ever will be removed. The split-second loss of control of "Snoopy," Apollo 10's lunar landing module, frighteningly pointed up how dependent the lives of the astronauts are on the perfect working of a zillion switches, relays, instruments and systems.

Whatever this says about the human capacity to accept what only a few years ago was unimaginable to most people, it is probably the sincerest form of tribute we can pay to the brave men of Apollo 10 and the thousands of other dedicated men on the ground.

While we pause in tribute to these men who are making space exploration possible, thoughtful consideration should be given to the side benefits that have come and will come from technological discoveries and application of them to enhance the daily life of the human race.

What a pattern of creativity educated men of the space program are unfolding. What a contrast to those other young men who are attempting to destroy by violence an educational system that inspired predecessors of the campus rebels.

Pohor Will Reverse De Gaulle Policy

By DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — This weekend a people for which America fought two world wars are set to vote the greatest turnabout of policy in recent French history.

When they go to the polls Sunday, they are almost certain to repudiate Charles de Gaulle by electing a hitherto inconspicuous French senator, Alan Pohor, who stands for almost everything that De Gaulle was opposed to.

Pohor will completely reverse Gaullist foreign policy. He will strongly support the United States in Europe, will back up a United Western Europe, probably return France to NATO, release the mirage phantom jets to Israel which Israel had paid for and De Gaulle canceled.

Finally, Pohor will get France back to being the old-time France without a lot of silly prestige projects.

In September there will be a devaluation of both the franc and the pound, plus a re-evaluation of the German mark upward.

And you can be certain that American tourists will flock back to France with a rush.

—Revolutionary Wedding—

Two opposite young people who sprang from opposite roots deep in the heart of America are getting married today. The girl's ancestors came to this country on the Mayflower. The boy's ancestors came in chains on a slave ship from Africa. Their marriage represents a new revolution in America.

The girl, Beryl Slocum, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Slocum of the State Department, and her ancestors go back to Miles Standish, a Pilgrim father famous in song and story.

The boy is Adam Clayton Powell III, whose many times great grandfather was known only by his first name or his slave number. The first date to which anyone could trace a member of the Powell family was May 4, 1865, when Adam Clayton Powell, Sr., was born in Franklin County, Va., twenty-five days after Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox. Powell never knew his father. His mother was part Indian and her father was German.

This was some time after Beryl Slocum's ancestors, Roger Williams and Chad Brown, had founded the state of Rhode Island. It was also at a time when the Powell family in Virginia was barely able to stay alive.

"My maternal grandmother," wrote Adam Powell, Sr., "was very fond of eating rats. She was a great hunter of small game. My earliest recollections were of direst poverty. The wealth of the South had been destroyed by the Civil War, and both white and poor colored suffered together."

By this time Miss Slocum's grandparents were

MONEY CLIPS

by Mort Reed

Call a Spade a Spade

A few readers have elected to disagree with the descriptive terms used in MONEY CLIPS to identify the devices on the coinage of the United States and have referred the author to the accepted nomenclature used in other numismatic columns and reference material to make their points. This is a good sign and it shows concern for other than just the probable market value and profit that may be derived from a coin.

The primary challenge seems to be with reference made in both of my columns, Coinology and Money Clips, to the terms Liberty Cap versus Turban Head, Winged Liberty Cap rather than Mercury Head and Classic Head instead of Turban Head. Those concerned seem to question my right to substitute one for the other and demand my reason for doing so. Since this is an educational point, I am more than happy to qualify my authority.

In the offset it should be understood that the devices represented by either of these terms were all arbitrary contrivances acceptable to both the designer and the interpreters of the prevailing Coinage Act. None of the designs in question were specified verbatim; all were the brainchild of the designer and all seemed to satisfy the director of the Mint as being in accord with the requirements of the act specifying a device emblematic of liberty and freedom.

To cite one example, the 1808 half dollar bears a female bust facing left, wearing a Phrygian slave's cap (an accepted symbol of liberty) and inscribed with the word LIBERTY. This particular coin is often listed as the "Turban head" half dollar merely because a worn specimen will show only the outline and this outline vaguely represents a lady wearing a turban. A second example is the so-called "Mercury Head" dime of 1916. Because this portrait of Mrs. Wallace Stevens is wearing a slave's cap with wings attached as a symbol of "free thought," the term Mercury Head was applied to it rather than Winged Liberty.

In the absence of specific standards regarding the correct identification for each device, a few of us have attempted to purify the nomenclature by dropping the less dignified terms usually applied to a coin in favor of its true identity.

When the societies and organizations such as the American Numismatic Association, the American Numismatic Society and the U.S. Mint accept their responsibility to attach proper identities to the designs on a coin and establish a set of standards in which these identities are acceptable nomenclature, I am sure this column and all other numismatic writers will use their suggestions.

With investors and speculators joining the ranks of the professional and non-professional numismatists, the industry has long since outgrown its infancy and any commercial endeavor realizing an annual dollar turnover in excess of $350 million should at least have one standard by which to gauge its commodity. Until then, the specifics as researched by this writer will have to stand until something better comes along.

"So you want to try out for one of the new shows featuring nudity, eh? What are your qualifications?"

Back around 1870 an Englishman named James Clay wrote about a whist hand that he called the great Vienna Coup. He said, "Permit me to introduce one of the most beautiful problems I have ever seen. It occurred a few months back in Vienna. The most celebrated player there looked at all the cards and said, 'Why, I shall make all 13 tricks!'"

He could do so all right. The game was whist, clubs trumps and South was on lead.

South would start by running off his four clubs. The suit would break and West would have to discard on the fourth club. He clearly could not afford to let a diamond or spade go so would chuck a heart. Now would come the Vienna Coup. South would cash his ace of spades in order to establish West's king. This name is now applied to all plays of this sort whenever they come up and is made every day by some expert. In fact we believe that almost all of today's good players know the play and make it on occasion.

Once the ace of spades is cashed South simply runs off dummy's five hearts and discards down to the ace-queen-small of diamonds. On the last heart poor West has to throw away a diamond in order to hang on to that good king of spades. Then the diamond finesse gives South the rest of the tricks.

We have tried to put the hand in contract form. South arrives at a rather unsound grand slam in no-trump but North's jump to four hearts undoubtedly made South optimistic. The 10 of hearts lead beats the grand slam but West opens the jack of clubs. South groans but makes the best of a bad job and runs off the 13 tricks.

It wasn't as easy a hundred years ago. One whist authority worked on the problem for three days before solving it; others gave it up as impossible. Today it is just a curiosity.

A Tear for Tom Swift Era

By BETTY CANARY

Once upon a time there were books called "light fiction." Others were called "summer novels" or books to lie in the hammock and dream with. There's no doubt the publishers have had Think Tank-type meetings and have come to the conclusion that readers are above all that now.

I'm not going to argue about the fact that life is different now, that we're living in a time of rapid changes. I'm not going to argue about the fact that principles and morals and deep thinking are year-round fare and not subjects suited only to discussions before a roaring fireplace while the snow piles high against the eaves.

But still, I lament the passing of summer novels, the kind that were light in content and easily put down while you had a game of tennis or fixed dinner, the kind where Laura always got through nurses' training and, in the last chapter, captured the brilliant intern.

There comes a time when one is sated with the type of work acclaimed as "an acerbic novel penned with incisive cleverness," or "symbolistic verse prophetic in its comparison of the transcendental egoist and the passionate romantic."

Confronted all year with obsessive essays and urgent realism, ah, how I pine for a simple little story about Edna, a poor little egg-candler from southern Illinois who dreamed of becoming a princess.

One could stay with Edna for awhile, then leave her without guilt long enough to drive the children to the swimming pool or even take a nap.

And flights of fancy came easily while reading her story. If SHE could do it, so could you. After all, Edna didn't have as much going for her as you did, but she achieved her particular pinnacle of success. She may not have made it to Monaco, but she did become Watermelon Princess of DuBois County. And all because she saved a portion of her egg-candling money each week to pay for modeling lessons.

There's another thing. Edna caused you to feel twinges of remorse and spurred you on to bigger and better efforts. You starting thinking about how you once wanted to become a missionary and you wondered whatever happened to the dreams, and why you had let them go in order to devote all your time to dry-skin care. She did NOT make you feel you should go out and crucify yourself on a downtown corner.

True, there are cycles in stories and reading habits, but I doubt that Edna will ever return to us. Alas, she has been relegated to that Great Outdated Library in the sky, along with the Hardy Boys and Frank Merriwell. I wonder if they ever see Nanook of the North.

DOCTOR'S MAILBAG

Diverticulitis, Cancer Are Not Related Diseases

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q — My doctor says I have diverticulitis. What is the cause? Does it become cancerous? I am on a low-residue diet but it hasn't helped me. Should I have an operation? Is there a permanent cure?

A — Diverticula or small outpouchings in the digestive tract are found in most persons who are over 40 (diverticulosis). They cause no symptoms unless they become inflamed (diverticulitis) as a result of irritation due to the putrefaction of partially digested food trapped in one of these sacs. Diverticulitis is sometimes mistaken for cancer and vice versa but the two diseases are not related.

Operation is advisable only if bouts of acute diverticulitis are persistent or recur frequently. In such cases, removal of the diseased bowel avoids rupture of one of the sacs and peritonitis.

Treatment with a low-residue diet is now believed to aggravate rather than relieve this condition. A diet that contains liberal amounts of cooked vegetables and fruit is preferred. Foods that have small seeds, such as raspberries, blackberries, tomatoes and figs, should, however, be avoided.

Although there is no cure, the disease can usually be controlled. After the acute stage has subsided, a tablespoon of barium sulfate in water or milk three or four times a day coats over the inflamed area and relieves the symptoms. Constipation is avoided by taking one of the psyllium seed preparations.

Q — I have diverticulosis. My doctor is giving me Sorboquel and Metamucil but after four months I am no better. What do you advise?

A — Simple diverticulosis usually requires no treatment but if you also have diverticulitis, Sorboquel to check the rapid movement of food through your digestive tract and Metamucil, a psyllium preparation, should help you. If your problem is complicated by colitis or some other disease you should consult a gastroenterologist.

Q — Should a person who has diverticulitis limit his intake of alcoholic beverages?

A — Yes, but not because of the diverticulitis.

Guest Editorial

NEW ORLEANS STATES ITEM: Safe Oldster Drivers. — Over 65 and having trouble with auto insurance? By way of a morale booster as much as a matter of thrift, the news is that the national Insurance Rating Board has recommended a premium cut to 5 per cent below younger drivers, effective at the start of 1970.

In other words, if the proposal is adopted, it will recognize that actual premium and loss experience of insurance firms has been more favorable with senior drivers than with other adult drivers. In the past there has been a widespread assumption that older drivers were high risks for insurance companies.

Since 1965, the board has been compiling statistics on which to make judgment about future rate adjustments. The revealing study is the result.

This kind word by insurance folks is better than a refill of geriatric pills.

Fast 33 Run at Indy

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (AP) — A Who's Who of world auto racing wheeled 33 cars onto the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today for the 53rd running of the 500-mile Memorial Day race. The flying start was scheduled at 12 noon EDT.

It was a wide open chase for about $750,000 in prize money, with so many variables nobody has ever cared to make it a betting proposition. One of the variables was probable intense heat, increasing fuel consumption and weakening drivers. Fuel was limited to a borderline 325 gallons. The temperature hit 90 in Indianapolis Thursday under clear skies and tire engineers said it was 145 on the surface of the 2½-mile asphalt track. More clouds were forecast

Saturday but the mercury was expected to climb at least into the high 80s. No rain was likely. It looked as if conditions would be much as they were in 1953, when relief drivers had to take over all but two cars and Carl Scarborough died of heat exhaustion.

All of the engines were in front, then. Now they have been moved to the rear and the cockpits are cooler. Modern fireproof uniforms, however, are extremely hot because they have to be worn over thermal underwear to be effective.

A.J. Foyt Jr. of Houston, starting the 500 for the 12th time and shooting for an unprecedented fourth victory, was acknowledged to be the man to beat.

He was the fastest qualifier at 170.568 mph, a record for a piston engine car, but slower than the record set by a turbine car, and won the pole position with his orange Coyote-Ford.

Foyt had fast company in the first row—Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa., twice the pole winner, and last year's winner Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., in the outside spot where he started last year.

Unser had a four-wheel-drive British Lola, with a turbo-charged Offenhauser engine which was expected to yield better fuel mileage than the more powerful turbocharged Fords. Andretti was in a Hawk-Ford.

Foyt and Unser were the only former winners in the field after the Lotus-Ford of 1968 world road racing champion, Graham Hill of London, was withdrawn because of possible faults in his wheel hubs.

The international driving set was represented by former world champions Jack Brabham of Australia and Denis Hulme of New Zealand.

Unser is defending U.S. Auto Club champion and Foyt and Andretti are former USAC champions.

The parade of champions also included Mark Donohue of Media, Pa., king of the Sports Car Club of America and of this year's Daytona 24-hour race, and Lee Roy Yarborough of Columbia, S.C., who won the World 600 stock car race at Charlotte, N.C., last week.

Yarborough, a standout of the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, also has won the Daytona 500 and the Rebel 400 at Darlington, S.C., this year.

The field, one of the best balanced in many years, was loaded with such potential winners as second generation speed stars Gary Bettenhausen and Bill Vukovich and veterans Dan Gurney, Gordon Johncock, Joe Leonard, Johnny Rutherford, Lloyd Ruby, Arnie Knepper and Mel Kenyon.

Gurney, driving an Eagle-Ford of his own design, finished second last year. Kenyon was third.

Early indications were that the Speedway would have one of its biggest crowds, sometimes estimated as high as 400,000. It never discloses the figure.

The official finish will not be announced until 8 a.m., EDT. Saturday and the prize fund distribution will not be released until the traditional victory dinner Saturday night.

President May Retire September 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Word is that Warren Giles, president of the National League, plans to retire Sept. 1 — two months short of an 18-year stint as NL helmsman.

Giles, now 73, was not available for comment early today. But it was reported that he told friends during a visit to his native Illinois he would end shortly his 50-year baseball career.

John O'Donnell, a long-time friend and retired sports editor of the Davenport, Iowa, Times Democrat, quoted Giles as saying:

"I informed all National League owners this week of my intentions to retire effective Sept. 1.

"Baseball is 100 years old this year and I've been in it 50 years. I had my 73rd birthday this week and I think it is a good time to retire."

Giles spent several recent days visiting Tiskilwa, Ill., where he was born, and the Davenport area.

His tenure as president is the longest in the history of the National League. He moved the league's headquarters here in 1952 when he succeeded Ford Frick.

He served as general manager of the Cincinnati Reds from 1936 to 1951.

American League Roundup

By DICK COUCH

Associated Press Sports Writer

Norm Cash poled two of Detroit's five home runs Thursday, helping Denny McLain and the Tigers tame the Oakland Athletics 8-4 for their ninth victory in 11 games.

Reggie Smith also crashed a pair of homers, leading the Boston Red Sox from behind to an 8-6 triumph over Kansas City in the only other game played in the American League.

Rain washed out Baltimore's scheduled night game at Seattle.

McLain checked the A's on seven hits and struck out 12 while bringing his season record to 8-4. Last season, he won his eighth on the same date—and went on to a brilliant 31-6 finish for the pennant-winning Tigers.

The durable Detroit ace appreciated Cash's fifth and sixth homers—as well as blasts by Willie Horton, Jim Northrup and rookie Ron Woods. But he thought Athletics owner Charlie Finley and Lloyd Fox, the organist at the Oakland Coliseum, rated less than five stars for their musical timing.

Fox broke into a ditty on his Wurlitzer while McLain was in the middle of his pitching motion with two out in the ninth inning and runners on second and third. McLain came to an abrupt halt, with his arms over his head, and was charged with a run-producing balk.

"Bush!" growled McLain, himself an organ virtuoso—and a Hammond Organ representative between pitching jobs. "If that's the way Finley has to win games, he can have his so-called ball club."

The Tigers trailed 3-1 in the fifth when Cash hit a two-run homer off Jim "Catfish" Hunter and Northrup followed with the go-ahead homer. A pair of seventh-inning runs gave Detroit a 6-3 margin and Cash unloaded again in the ninth before Woods hit his first major league homer.

Smith, batting clean-up for the Red Sox in their last 10 games, drove in four runs with his fifth and sixth homers and also drilled a single and double in five trips to the plate. The spree boosted his average 21 points to .287.

He went 8-for-12 in the three-game set at Kansas City and has accounted for 14 of his 29

RBI since moving into the No. 4 spot in the order.

The Red Sox trailed 4-3 in the eighth, when Dalton Jones doubled. Carl Yastrzemski walked and Smith socked his second homer into the right field stands.

Tony Conigliaro also homered before the five-run inning was over and the Sox survived a two-run homer by Pat Kelly in the ninth, nailing their seventh victory in nine starts.

To Look Into Clay

HOUSTON (AP) — Lawyers for former heavyweight champion Cassius Clay say they want to see and hear five wiretap conversations involving Clay.

They filed a brief Thursday in Federal Court asking postponement of a scheduled Monday hearing to give them time to assess the contents of the conversations.

U.S. Dist. Judge Joe Ingraham did not rule immediately on the requests and apparently does not plan to until the Monday hearing.

Ingraham set the Monday hearing May 6 to determine if Clay's conviction on charges of refusing to be inducted into the Armed Service was brought about in any part by government wiretapping.

The Supreme Court, to which Clay appealed his conviction, ordered the hearing last March. Clay was convicted June 20, 1967 in Ingraham's court. He was sentenced to five years in prison and fined 10,000. He had challenged the legality of his I-A draft classification on grounds he was a Black Muslim minister named Muhammad Ali.

The government has agreed to permit Clay's lawyers to study transcripts of four conversations in the judge's chambers.

They claim the fifth conversation involves matters of national security.

Ingraham has signed an order prohibiting defense attorneys from disclosing contents of the four transcripts.

McCallister Early Memphis Open Leader

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Bob McCallister, a tour regular but long-time also-ran, held a one-stroke lead going into today's second round of the Memphis Open Golf Tournament after shooting the best 18 holes of his 10 year pro career.

He surged over the steaming, little Colonial Country Club course in a course-record matching 63 in the first round Thursday, but his seven under par effort left him far from secure.

In fact, 19 players were within three shots.

Just behind McCallister, a crew-cut, 6-foot Californian, at 64 were Bert Yancey, winner of last week's Atlanta Classic, and a trio looking for their first tour victory—Lee Elder, Ronnie Reif and John Lotz.

Mac McLendon shot a 65 despite a triple bogey 7 on the 14th hole, where he hit his tee shot into an unplayable lie, took a drop, missed the green, then three-putted. But he also had eight birdies.

Also at that 65 were grinning Lee Trevino, the reigning U.S. Open champion, leading money winner Gene Littler and Lou Graham.

BATTING — Reggie Smith, Red Sox, drove in four runs with a pair of homers and also cracked a double and single, leading Boston past Kansas City 8-6.

Bosox Dump K.C. Royals Behind Hitting of Smith

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Boston Red Sox, it turned out, had the real thunder.

Throughout Thursday afternoon's Boston-Kansas City Royals baseball game in Kansas City thunder and lightning dotted the sky as an ominous-looking thunderhead skirted the city just to the east.

It never did rain, but the Royals got caught in a deluge anyway, as the Red Sox poured across five runs in the eighth inning to wipe out a 4-3 Kansas City lead and whip the Royals 8-6.

The St. Louis Cardinals had an off day, but take on the Cincinnati Reds tonight in Busch Stadium with Bob Gibson (6-2) scheduled to pitch against Jim Maloney (3-1) or George Culver (2-4).

The Royals had a Memorial Day doubleheader scheduled this afternoon with the New York Yankees. Steve Jones (2-2) and Wally Bunker (1-2) were due to pitch against the Yanks' Fritz Peterson (6-5) and Stan Bahnsen (1-7).

Most of Boston's thunder came from the bat of outfielder Reggie Smith, who blasted two home runs, a double and a single and finished the three-game series with an 8-for-12 performance to raise his batting average 39 points to .287.

His three-run homer highlighted the five-run eighth inning when the Red Sox erupted against ace Royals reliever Moe Drabowsky. Tony Conigliaro also homered in the inning before Drabowsky retired after suffering a foot injury in a first-base collision with George Scott. The injury was not believed serious.

The Royals scored twice in the first inning on Mike Fiore's double, twice in the fifth on singles by Joe Foy and Ed Kirkpatrick and twice in the ninth on Pat Kelly's home run.

The victory gave Boston the series, two games to one, and kept the Royals below .500 with a 21-23 record.

Kansas City recalled outfielder George Spriggs from their Class Triple-A farm team at Omaha in the American Association Thursday. Spriggs, who is 188 in 10 games with the Royals early this season had a .355 batting average with five home runs and 20 runs batted in for the month he spent with Omaha. He replaced Joe Keough, optioned to Omaha Wednesday.

third run when Wills misplayed a grounder by Willie Davis. Davis cracked a two-run homer in the first inning. Donn Clendenon's error led to another run in the inning and Stoneman wild pitched Crawford home in the third.

Mack Jones and Coco Laboy homered for Montreal.

The Reds got three home runs in beating Pittsburgh and extending their winning streak to seven.

A Bushel of Ideas From a Single Source

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—My family and I wish to express our gratitude for the column by sending in some ideas. I have put a catch on one of my shallow kitchen drawers so it will not come completely out, lined it with a removable piece of plastic (for cleaning) and use this for children too big for a high chair and too small to sit at the table. Our blind son also used this when he was younger. They learn to be neat sooner and if something does spill it is not all over the table and the floor.

I put a playpen on its side on top of two chairs and use it for a drying rack. I first lacquered the dowels around the sides as a protection for clothing hung there.

I made a vanity for myself out of an old suitcase. First, a divider made of small boards was put in the bottom of the case. Then I glued a large piece of mirror to the inside top. It is all painted and decorated and stands on a small table.

I straightened out two wire coat hangers and wrapped one end of each around an end of a closet rod. I then took another pole, made grooves in the ends and wrapped the ends of the wires around these poles and resting in the grooves. I taped over the ends so there are no rough places for the clothes to catch on them. They are used for hanging the small children's clothes. This looks like a swing and the children can easily reach them and hang up their own clothes. Their good clothes or out-of-season clothes are hung on the permanent top rod. Those they wear all the time are on the temporary lower one.—BARBARA

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—My teen-age son always hates to wear new jeans. They are "too dark and new looking." He wants me to fade them with bleach. I wonder if any of the readers can tell me how to do this safely. Or, is there a better way to fade them?—MRS. F. M.

DEAR POLLY—I have just discovered that a plastic drinking straw is great for cleaning crumbs from the bottom of my toaster. It can be used to brush crumbs out of corners and also to blow through. By using such a straw it is possible to direct the air on just the right spot.—MRS. J. T. B.

'Bus Nut' Fans All Prefer Gentle References to Mobile Homes

By JIM CROSSLEY
NEA Staff Writer

Some call them house buses, others house cars or mobile coaches. Most owners refer to them as motor coaches. The whole "bus nut" clan would bless you if you'd use the name most acceptable to them, family motor coaches.

Up, up and away! Who wouldn't enjoy taking off for a vagabond adventure in such fabulous machines? Carrying all the comforts of home... bathrooms, bedrooms, kitchens... completely self-sufficient, self-contained. Ah, the pleasure! Drifting like a cloud with never a care.

But for all their appeal, it is still a small fleet though a growing one. There are probably no more than 30,000 family motor coaches on the road or parked in driveways ready to go.

No doubt, the reason the number isn't larger is because of the cost.

Factory-built units, the large ones, bought new, run around the cost of a home. Even the creations of the do-it-yourselfers, those who start with a second-hand school or highway bus and rip out the innards, can run into money.

Because it is a relatively small group, it is easy to detect in it the importance of a central organization that welds it together.

Says Ford Shares Blame For Topsy Army Vehicle

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford Motor Co. must share blame with the Army for the tipover-prone M151 truck and the thousands of noncombat GI casualties it has caused according to Ralph Nader.

Ford, he said, knew of the vehicle's instability at the time it was first produced.

The government should require Ford to officially notify the Army of the M151's tricky suspension system and correct it on the estimated 90,000 M151s now in use throughout the world, Nader said.

Meanwhile, Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., who, with Nader, led the federal government into the auto safety field, demanded that Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird and Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe investigate the jeep-like M151.

Nader's charges and Ribicoff's letters were in response to disclosure by The Associated Press that hundreds of soldiers had been killed, thousands injured in accidents involving the M151 since the Army began buying nearly 400 million worth of the vehicles from Ford in 1960.

It was a rear-end suspension system similar to that of the M151 that led Nader into an investigation of Chevrolet's Corvair, on which he based his best-seller, "Unsafe at Any Speed."

The fact that the M151 had a similar problem surfaced briefly at the 1965 Ribicoff hearings that produced current auto safety laws.

Nader told The AP the Army "should specially compensate the injured men or the families of the fatally injured men for such utterly inexcusable indifference to their safety."

But Ford, he said, "cannot avoid sharing the responsibility with the Army for this dangerous vehicle and the casualties it produces. Ford participated in developing the specifications for the vehicle, knew of its instability, yet remained silent as it reaped the profits from this massive Army procurement contract."

When the first Corvairs came out in 1959, Nader said "two Ford engineers took it out on the company's test track—and to their amazement, it promptly flipped over."

"Ford spokesmen repeatedly referred to the unsafe suspension system of the Corvair. Yet at the same time, they were building an even more unstable vehicle, the M151, for the Army."

"Henry Ford's company does not appreciate that it has a duty beyond meeting contract specifications: an even higher duty to eliminate serious hazards to soldiers driving these vehicles."

Nader said the Army's problem "is one of military bureaucrats refusing to admit a mistake."

Noting that the Army was aware of an unusually high accident rate as early as 1962, he asked, "Why, then, didn't the Army change the specifications for the M151 produced between 1962 and the present?"

"Why did it allow nearly 100,000 more such jeeps to be produced that had a pronounced flipover tendency?"

"Rather than admit a mistake, the Army spent more taxpayer funds to develop training materials and exercises to teach young soldiers how to adjust to a dangerous vehicle, instead of building a safe one."

Speculate on Cause Of Actor's Death

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Police say actor Jeffrey Hunter probably suffered a dizzy spell, tripped and fell to his death down a short flight of stairs.

Hunter, 42, was found unconscious at the foot of the stairs Monday in his Van Nuys home. He died after brain surgery Tuesday.

Detective Sgt. Jesse A. Tubbs said Wednesday Hunter suffered recurring dizzy spells after he was thrown against a train compartment last month while making a movie in Spain.

Tubbs said the actor apparently lost his balance at the top of three-step stairway, knocked over a planter and fell, fracturing his skull.

Funeral services will be Saturday at St. Mark's Episcopal Church in Van Nuys.

The Everglades National Park in Florida covers more than a million acres, as much area as the state of Delaware.

membership number displayed on the coach identifies the owners at a glance. Chances are they've read about each others' adventures in "Family Motor Coaching," the official publication that has chronicled the tribe since its beginning in 1963.

Awhile ago, the coach that hove into sight might have contained Vic and Vi White (association number F748), an Australian couple that spent three years touring North America before leaving for South Africa where they now are.

If the number was F309 it meant the Brayton Stewarts who have traveled in 57 countries including a 24,000-mile trip from Clinton, Iowa, to the southern part of South Africa.

Number F3 would be Bud and Audrey Stone who learned early — back in 1948 — that parking for the night along the road in a secluded sylvan glen by a river might completely wreck the evening for the habits of the local lover's lane.

Members' letters in "Family Motor Coaching" and get-togethers of the 16 regional chapters make it all one happy family.

Family motor coaches, with their own electric generators, have more latitude than most, of course. Ken Scott, executive director of the association, says, "Biggest shortage is destination-type parking, locations where tenters or trailerers want to park for a few days. Coaches primarily use their vehicles for travel and are interested only in a place to park overnight."

Parking spots add to the adventure. Those same Stones, F3, have an anecdote: They parked late one evening at the side of the road alongside three trailers. Next morning they discovered they were part of a gypsy camp, fortune tellers on the way to a nearby carnival.

Pettis County Post 16, The American Legion, will meet on Monday, June 2 at 8:00 P.M. The Ladies Auxiliary will also meet.

Maryville Firm Has Role In U.S. Space Programs

By B. J. ALCOTT
Maryville Daily Forum.
For The Associated Press
MARYVILLE, Mo. (AP) — The United States and the world this week are hailing the Apollo 10 astronauts for their successful space exploration as a prelude to landing a man on the moon in July.

But no one has been as interested as Norman Robbins, president, and Harold VanSickle, electrical engineer, of the Robbins Lightning Protection Co., a Maryville firm that for more than half a century has been making lightning rods for protection of rural homes and barns, elevators and government buildings and installations.

The firm has become sophisticated in the past 10 years and, in addition to selling and installing lightning protection systems, has designed and installed static electricity control systems on the towers and other installations from which space shots are made.

VanSickle designed the first static control system for Pad 19 on the then Cape Canaveral in 1959 and later it was modified and the Molly Brown shot in the Gemini-Titan was made from there in 1965.

The Robbins firm, one of three in the nation doing this specialized work at Cape Kennedy and at Merritt Island, from where the Apollo shots are being made, designed and installed some of the static control systems on Pad 39 A, B and C, mobile launching units.

At one time hundreds of firms produced and installed lightning rods, primarily in rural areas. And a lightning rod is normally thought of as a farm service instrument, as a relic of the horse and carriage days.

But this is not so.

Powder plants and defense installations were "rodged" during World War II days with the Robbins firm one of the leading manufacturers and installers.

Today more and more schools, municipal buildings and tall skyscrapers are being protected.

According to the National Board of Fire Underwriters each year more than 500 persons are killed and 1,000 are victims of lightning. Many millions of dollars worth of property are destroyed each year by lightning, which still is one of the leading causes of fire—and the primary cause of church and barn fires.

"A lot of people aren't aware the business still exists," Robbins says. "But actually the industry has shown steady growth every year and is bigger than ever."

The business has changed a great deal, Robbins points out. The lightning rod salesman traveling in his buggy from farm to farm—the city slicker who had to be put up for the night—was the favorite subject of jokes at the turn of the century.

Today it is a precise, technical business. Robbins' engineering department spends its time working on government contracts and with engineers and architects to provide modern lightning protection systems for leading structures.

Robbins likes to tell the story of a Southern architect who thought lightning rods were unnecessary on the new skyscraper he was building. Occupants of the new building complained of electrical problems during the slightest storm. Finally, when the building was struck, the electrical charge went right to an elaborate computer setup with startling results. Soon Robbins was providing a lightning protection system.

Probably the most famous lightning rod is on the Washington Monument. An aluminum cap about the size of a man's head is connected to four gold-plated copper tubes which lead down to the iron stairway and elevator shaft to provide grounding. When installed in 1884, aluminum cost $1.10 an ounce, but the expenditure was worth every penny by providing protection through the thousands of lightning storms it has experienced over the years.

Today's lightning rods bear little resemblance to those of yesterday. Although there is some movement back to ornamental balls and swirls and weathervanes, plain aluminum rods about a foot long and ending in a sharp point connected by an aluminum cable are the basic elements of the modern system.

"Prior to World War II," Robbins says, "we used about 90 per cent copper and 10 per cent aluminum. Today it's about 75 per cent aluminum."

Lightning strikes the same place twice (dozens of times annually to such structures as the Empire State Building) because of what it is—an electrical charge rushing to meet its opposite. Generally negative charges accumulate in clouds while positive charges build up in the earth, usually collecting in tall or isolated objects.

When the attraction becomes strong enough, the charges leap across the gap and there you have it—lightning. Contrary to the general thought that a rod carries the lightning bolt to the ground, a lightning protection system is designed to bleed off these positive charges to that the negatives aren't interested in coming down.

For a person caught out in a thunderstorm, the simplest rule is to get low or in a car. Running to an isolated tree or an unprotected golf shelter is the worst thing to do. And for goodness sake, put down that putter!

Vacation Post Cards Are Doubtful Tributes

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Jumping to conclusions:

It is a doubtful tribute to receive a vacation post card. The people who send them usually are either trying to kid themselves into believing they are having a great time, or to let you subtly know how much better off they are than you.

Pet peeves: Seeing a grown man at his office desk eating a box of raisins.

Second sight is that marvelous gift of nature which prevents most of us from falling in love at first sight.

The best way to break up the logjam in higher education isn't to make it easier to get into college—but harder to get out of kindergarten.

People look most dull and vacant-faced when riding on a subway, most alive and alert when riding on a roller coaster. So why don't they build subways with thrilling dips and climbs like roller coasters? It would be worth the added cost just to make a merrier mankind.

If every American abstained each day from buying just one thing he saw and wanted but didn't really need, the inflation would be over in 30 days.

Favorite Italian proverb: "Some people will find something to cry about even if they have a loaf of bread under each arm."

When an unabridged dictionary in a childless home is too well dusted, you can figure that the owner is probably a hypocrite. Few adults actually use a large dictionary often enough to keep it dust free.

One sure sign that a husband is henpecked is if his wife steps into the street ahead of him to signal a cab to halt. It shows that she is more accustomed than he to asserting authority and exercising initiative within the family.

The prevalence of illness can partly be explained by the fact they are making medicines too pleasing to the palate, so that some people eat them as if they were candy. The quickest cures come from taking bad-tasting medicines.

A liar is any person over 40 who claims he never snores. But women are so vain on this point that they would plead guilty to grand larceny before they'd admit to snoring.

One of the nicest things about living in a big city is that you can pull down your window blinds without stirring gossip among your neighbors.

Few things give a man more of a feeling of immortality than inheriting money or planting a tree.

Psychiatric Help Solves a Problem

Dear Ann Landers: I'm going to be June bride and you made it possible.

When I wrote to you for the first time I was 17. I kept falling into bed with every fellow who smiled at me. It didn't mean anything that I was giving myself away. I had a whole list of excuses. I was even sleeping with boys I didn't like because I hated to hurt their feelings by saying no. You told me to get psychiatric help but I kept telling myself, "I'm not nuts. I'm just weak."

I wrote to you again on my 19th birthday. I tried to count the fellows I'd slept with so I could be completely honest with you. I had trouble remembering some of their names. When I got to number sixteen, I realized something must be wrong with me. It was then that I took your advice and went for counseling.

After fourteen months of therapy I am a different person. It's hard to believe I did those crazy things. And now I understand why I did them. I had such a low opinion of myself I didn't care what I did.

A wonderful man has asked me to marry him and I feel like the luckiest girl in the world. Thank you, Ann. I'm going to name our first baby girl after you. But no one will ever know why. — Happy.

Dear Happy: Congratulations and best wishes.

Dear Ann: I'm so sick of the kitchen I could die.

At 6:30 A.M. I pull a 16-year-old out of bed, take her breakfast order, and fix it. At 7 A.M. I drag the 15-year-old out of bed, ask him what HE wants and go back to the stove. If I happen to have oatmeal ready, he's sure to ask for Cream of Wheat. My husband gets up at 7:30. When he smells bacon he wants grits. If I have grits he wants pancakes. On the days I have cinnamon rolls he requests blueberry muffins.

No sooner do I finish the breakfast dishes, I have to start lunch for my husband. He usually brings a buddy or two. (No notice. I'm supposed to be prepared.) The kids come from school at 3:15. So I'm back in the kitchen. They always bring two or three friends.

When the kids are through snacking I have to clean up the mess and start on supper. If I'm out of the kitchen by 8:00 P.M. I'm lucky. Nobody helps me with the dishes. The kids have homework or social plans. My husband works hard and I wouldn't ask him to help.

Don't tell me I've spoiled my family. I know it. Just tell me what to do about it. — Chained

Dear Chained: Hold a conference. Tell the clan you are ready to cave in from exhaustion. Announce new rules: (1) One breakfast menu which you will decide. (2) Lunch has been discontinued unless hubby agrees to come home alone. (3) The kids are to prepare their own snacks and clean up after themselves. (4) Dinner dishes will be done by your able-bodied teen-agers. (Yes, the boy too.)

If you aren't willing to follow my plan, accept the fact that you enjoy slavery and twitcherbellyachin'.

'Lifting Body' Sets New Record

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Dropped from the wings of a B52 bomber, an HL10 lifting body vehicle soared at 825 miles an hour on its own to a record altitude—64,500 feet.

"Boy, this baby really climbs now," space agency pilot John A. Manke radioed as he opened all four barrels of the HL10's rocket engine Wednesday. On May 9, the HL10 set a record speed of 725 m.p.h. at 54,000 feet.

The wedge-shaped craft, a prototype of future space ferries, is expected to reach 1,100 m.p.h. in later flights. Space agency planner hope vehicles like it will be able to ferry men and equipment between space-craft and ground bases.

The HL10 is called a lifting body because it gets its boosting power from the shape of its fuselage instead of the wings.

Heat Wave Is Fatal

NEW DELHI (AP) — A heat wave sweeping northern India claimed two lives in Delhi Wednesday, bringing the toll during the last five days to 40. The mercury hovered around 114 degrees in several places.
